

questioning the canon

lunchtime
conversations at design at riverside

design studio

aidan mitchelmore

Aidan Mitchelmore recently graduated from the University of Waterloo School of Architecture. Throughout his two years spent in Waterloo's M Arch program, Aidan was interested in using physical models as tools for design, rather than solely for representation purposes. Through the process of designing a speculative proposition for a new public (and counterpublic) space within Toronto's Union Station, Aidan has developed an interest in large public and cultural buildings as well as architectural sites located in urban networks. With previous work experience in Australia and the U.K., he is now working in Toronto as an Intern Architect pursuing his architecture licence. Currently, he plans to gain experience designing buildings with an urban, public, and social focus while practicing at architectural design offices.

WATERLOO | ARCHITECTURE

IDEA/EXCHANGE

supported by

OAA

SCHOOL OF ARCHITECTURE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF WATERLOO
CAMBRIDGE ART GALLERIES DESIGN AT RIVERSIDE
7 MELVILLE STREET SOUTH CAMBRIDGE ONTARIO