The Project:

The Waterloo Centre for Germany Studies wants to document the role of German culture in Waterloo Region. We're looking to speak with Germans who immigrated here and/or their children (i.e., the first generation).

Why Participate?

Your story will be preserved in an archive for future generations and included in a book about the German community in Waterloo Region. You'll also receive a DVD of the interview to keep. Share it with your family and friends!

What Happens in an Interview?

The interview can be recorded at your home or at the University of Waterloo. It takes about one hour.

The interviewers are bilingual and can speak both English and German. They will ask questions about life in Europe, immigrating to North America, living in Waterloo Region, and raising family. You don't have to answer all questions: it's up to you what you wish to talk about.

Where Can I Get More Information?
