

Jay's Participation Policy

From class syllabus

There are a variety of ways to participate in this class, and they include:

- traditional modes, like volunteering to talk in class, ask questions, or provide opinions and ideas
- offering examples of writing and communication, or of texts for analysis, either by volunteering in class, or by emailing this example to Jay so he can share it
- asking a question to Jay by email – a question that Jay can address in class, and that will help all students
- offering feedback to your peers on their ideas and their writing in a respectful and constructive manner
- taking part in small groups and being an active and engaged listener
- taking notes that can be shared with classmates when we cover a difficult concept or idea; or taking notes that can be shared with classmates who might need to miss class
- contributing ideas and questions to Jay via email if you need to miss class yourself; or offering to review the work of peers via email if you need to miss class

You will be asked to reflect on your participation twice through the semester, offering examples of how you have participated via the modes listed above, or via other modes that you'd like to suggest yourself. Your grade will be based on these reflections.