True chemical education is never limited to our individual classrooms and students, but naturally extends to other teachers and students through the active sharing of ideas at conferences and through newsletters and publications such as Chem 13 News. Nor should your teaching end when you physically leave the classroom behind at retirement. Make the world your classroom by finding some means by which you can continue to share your ideas so that teachers and students left behind can benefit from your knowledge and successes. It requires such a small effort on your part to have a huge positive effect on others.

Debbie Boone's hit song "transformed" into a different, more "noble" light.

A practical joke about to go horribly wrong.
