Course Description

This course is designed to bridge the gap between your academic experience and your professional experience as an economist. Over the course of your employment, you doubtlessly encountered some problems that academic economists write about. These economic problems may have been what you were hired to work on, or perhaps they stemmed from the workplace itself. Almost certainly, these economic problems in the field were not exactly as depicted in academic writings. Your job will be to describe these economic problems as you encountered them and to discuss what academic economists have to say on the topic, as well as to either describe how people tried to solve these problems in the field, or to propose a solution yourself.

Course Goals and Learning Outcomes

As mentioned, the main goal of this course is to bring the tools you have learned in the classroom to your professional experience. You will produce a written essay to this effect.

Required/Recommended Text

There are no required texts for this course. You will have to find academic articles relevant to your experience, however.

Course Requirements and Assessment

	Date of Evaluation (if known)	Weighting
Assessment
Paper Proposal	Jan 28	20%
Progress Report	Mar 4	20%
Final Paper	Apr 5	60%
Total		100%

Paper Proposal

Specifics of your paper proposal will be worked out together with me if desired, but you need to have a firm handle on what you will be writing about by the due date.

Progress Report

Again, specifics can be determined together with me, but you need to demonstrate that you have been working on your final paper and are in good shape to finish in time.

Final Paper

What exactly your final paper will entail will be in meetings with me, but it should include a literature review and some original analysis on your part. Most papers will be between 15-25 pages in length.

Late Work

Late work will not be marked, so please make sure you hand in everything on time or make arrangements with your advisor in advance for any extensions.
