- Inspired by DaVinci @ Guelph
 - E.g. ecology lab sessions, guest lectures
- Apply university skills and knowledge in presentations to schools
- Eco-schools certification, guest lectures

Necessity of committee?

 The scale of engagement requires more than one individual handling these tasks

Lots of overlap with other council positions in external communications

Are we qualified to perform guest lectures and similar outreach?

- Work with teachers to validate content and contribution (e.g. key talking points)
- Logistical matters are handled in collaboration with schools
- We are able to support eco-schools and similar initiatives
- We are capable of drafting lessons and pulling from course knowledge

How will school-relations support our mission in ESS to support undergraduate students (especially when our own engagement is low)?

- Builds confidence for undergraduate students
- Employable skills

Does the conference meaningfully contribute for the investment we put in?

- Conference models exist (schools send a number of students who bring back info)
- It is going above and beyond; it mainly benefits community, but we benefit from reputation and builds organization skills

Scale is negotiable, pending cost-benefit analysis / feasibility studies Conference is an end goal, cumulative of outreach work Cross-faculty events may not be wise given our struggle to engage our own faculty. Should be taken to recruitment: students pay fees to benefit environment students Not necessarily for recruitment purposes; Student benefit is limited to the few organizers/outreach people. Re: conference & outreach Not low risk; reputation at stake Doesn't solve existing engagement problems Requires extensive experience and more work than volunteering provides It is possible, as is proven by existing conferences 13. WESEF - Ayman a. WESEF is reviewing proposal applications and the WESEF Student Award winner this week. Decisions will be sent out sometime next week. b. WESEF Report is officially released.
