WORLD MUSIC ENSEMBLE: BALINESE CHAMBER GAMELAN (GENDER WAYANG)
Department of Music, Conrad Grebel University College
University of Waterloo
FALL 2015

1. Description: BALINESE CHAMBER GAMELAN (GENDER WAYANG)
On the island of Bali, Indonesia the idea of community and the spirit of interaction are highly valued and extend to music-making. Being an aural/oral tradition, repertoire is learned and played without notation. Students experience this communal process of creating a unified sound and melody on a chamber gamelan called gender wayang (one of several types of gamelan found in Bali). The ensemble comprises two or four ten-key metallophones. Two mallets are used to execute independent left and right hand parts. Gender (pronounced gen’dé(a)r) wayang is considered the most complex, technically difficult, and highly regarded music in Bali. End-of-term performances will be part of the large gamelan ensemble concerts.
No previous experience with gamelan or notation is necessary. Open to all for credit or as an extra-curricular activity.

   Director: I Dewa Made Suparta (Balinese Artist-in-Residence)
