Dr. Nadine Furtado is an Assistant Clinical Professor at the University of Waterloo School of Optometry and Vision Science where she is Head of the Ocular Disease and Imaging Service. She earned her Doctor of Optometry and MSc. in Vision Science from the State University of New York (SUNY) College of Optometry. Following graduation, she completed a residency in Ocular Disease and Primary Care at the Veterans Affairs (VA) Hudson Valley Healthcare System. Dr. Furtado is a Fellow of the American Academy of Optometry (FAAO), a Clinical Director for Special Olympics Ontario, and a member of the Board of Directors of the Vision Institute of Canada.
Lacey Haines graduated from Memorial University of Newfoundland in 2008 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Biology (major) and Math (minor). She completed her Doctor of Optometry Degree at the University of Waterloo School of Optometry and Vision Science (WOVS) in 2012. Since graduating, Lacey has completed residency training in Cornea and Contact Lenses and is now pursuing a PhD in Vision Science at WOVS. She joined the WOVS faculty as an Assistant Clinical Professor in 2016. She is also a fellow of the International Association of Contact Lens Educators. Clinical and research interests include anterior segment imaging, specialty contact lens fitting, keratoectasia and management of contact lens complications.
