Public Policy and Administration Minor

Students enrolled in any degree program or plan may pursue a minor designation in Public Policy and Administration.

Housed in the Department of Political Science, this minor is intended to appeal to students with an interest in Canadian government and politics, and particularly those interested in a career in areas such as public service, policy analysis, program evaluation and policy advocacy. The courses selected for the Minor build students’ knowledge of the machinery of government, the relationships between elected officials and appointed administrators, and the actors, interests and institutions involved in the development and implementation of public policy.
