

Teens and Social Relationships

in partnership with

UNIVERSITY OF WATERLOO

centre for mental health
research and treatment

Thursday, November 17 at 7 p.m.

The teenage years are filled with new social experiences, which can be both fun and challenging. It can be tricky for parents and caregivers to know how best to provide support during this period.

Led by graduate students in University of Waterloo's Clinical Psychology program, this talk will help parents learn more about the changing landscape of their teens' social relationships.

kpl.org/SignUp

