Course Description: Our contemporary environmental crises do not operate in a political vacuum. Though efforts are made at all levels of society to address environmental issues, many of the challenges we face require transboundary coordination and governance. This course begins to unpack the various the challenges of governing environmental issues across international borders. Students will learn about conventional sites of state-based government, international organizations and agencies as well as emerging forms of governance, including private governance and the role of non-state actors. Students will develop a sense of the various political interests that influence global environmental governance and the challenges to enacting effective governance.

Pre-Requisites: At least 3A.

Course Objectives:

By the end of this course, students should:

- Define and apply key concepts in contemporary global governance
- Describe the different kinds of global governance actors and their roles

- Understand global environmental issues in greater depth and the presence or absence of appropriate governance mechanisms
- Analyze and compare different forms of global environmental governance and assess their effectiveness
