Rationale for Change

The Department of Sexuality, Marriage, and Family Studies has rebranded with a name change to Sexualities, Relationships, and Families (SRF). The renaming will not alter any of the program plans or requirements. All mentions of the previous SMF subject code and plan names are to be changed and requisites will be updated to reflect these changes. The changes to the components correct a data transfer error.

Description

Relationship breakdown is a social phenomenon that can have legal consequences. This course provides students with a socio-legal foundation in current family law. Topics may include the court system, the litigation process, property division, spousal and child support, child co-parenting, child protection, high conflict families, and alternative dispute resolution processes. Students will learn about the strengths and limitation of the law to address relationship breakdown and develop transferable skills for careers in policy, social work, mediation, family justice, education, and community service organizations.

Description ⓘ

This seminar, taken in students' final Sexualities, Relationships, and Families winter term, invites students to integrate their knowledge in the domains of sexualities, relationships, and families and make connections across academic, experiential, and personal learning throughout their undergraduate education. Students will critically reflect on their learning experiences and how they will apply these to their future endeavours. Students will process their learning through a variety of possible methods, such as reflective writing, presentations, and contributions to a capstone class project.

Existing

Description ⓘ

This seminar, normally taken in the last term of study, invites students to integrate their knowledge in the domains of sexuality, relationships, and families and make connections among theories, research, and practices. The capstone focus provides students the opportunity for critical self-reflection on their university experience.

Rationale for Change ⓘ

The Department of Sexuality, Marriage, and Family Studies has rebranded with a name change to Sexualities, Relationships, and Families (SRF). The renaming will not alter any of the program plans or requirements. That said, the department has reviewed the course calendar and has reviewed every course and description to ensure there is congruency with the new name. Additionally, efforts have been made to update the course descriptions to be more student centric and highlight learning outcomes. All mentions of the previous SMF subject code and plan names are to be changed and requisites will be updated to reflect these changes.

Muslim Lives & Practices

Description ⓘ

This course examines the religion, cultures, and politics associated with Islamic civilization in the modern world, focusing on the everyday lives and practices of ordinary Muslims. Through anthropological approaches based on ethnographic fieldwork in a variety of geographical areas, students study topics such as ritual, language, gender, authority, representation, stereotypes, fundamentalism, and secularism. Students will develop greater understanding of religious diversity by studying insider and outsider perspectives on Muslim lives and practices worldwide. Students will improve their critical thinking, writing, and oral communication skills to engage academic and public debates about Islam.

The Church's Song

Description ⓘ

This course examines the origins of the music sung by the Christian church and its development up to the present. The course considers the Church's Song as theological, poetic, musical, cultural, and spiritual expression, and the use of songs in a variety of worship settings. Students will practice methods of song analysis, assess musical meaning, value and effects in various cultural contexts, and reflect on written and oral transmission of music.

Description ⓘ

This course will present a concentrated history of the major trends and patterns within the representation of human sexuality and sexual health in 20th- and 21st-century comics art. Students will be introduced to the unique and powerful role that comics have played in representing sexuality and sexual well-being through exposure to various artists and scholars on the subject. Students will explore key concepts through close readings of relevant texts, and through the application of key theoretical materials, modeling the kind of analytical work that students will then produce themselves in both discussion and written assignments.

Description ⓘ

This course will present a concentrated history of the major trends and patterns within the representation of human sexuality and sexual health in 20th- and 21st-century comics art. Students will be introduced to the unique and powerful role that comics have played in representing sexuality and sexual well-being through exposure to various artists and scholars on the subject. Students will explore key concepts through close readings of relevant texts, and through the application of key theoretical materials, modeling the kind of analytical work that students will then produce themselves in both discussion and written assignments.

Description ⓘ

In the typical health care model most of the attention is focused on the patient and their well-being, often ignoring the health, financial, and emotional impact on those who provide unpaid informal care and support - family and friends. Through the reading of memoirs, students with an interest in aging, health care, and the therapeutic professions will grapple with the profound impact that caregiving during illness has on carers and relationships across the spectrum - from young carers, to intimate partners, to adult children caring for aging parents, and beyond. Discussions will be grounded in the social, legal, and policy contexts.

Description ⓘ

This course examines how spirituality and religion have informed approaches to health and medicine from the 19th century to the present, including understandings of disease, illness, health, sexuality, and the body. Topics may include spiritual and/or religious concepts of health and sickness; meditation, prayer, and healing; "alternative" medicine; Indigenous approaches to health and medicine; mental health and spiritual practice; and religion and health care justice. Students are introduced to a variety of research methods that will help them identify, understand, and critically assess the complex boundaries that exist between modern medicine and spirituality.

Change

Academic Unit ApprovalRationale for Change

The Department of Sexuality, Marriage, and Family Studies has rebranded with a name change to Sexualities, Relationships, and Families (SRF). The renaming will not alter any of the program plans or requirements. That said, the department has reviewed the course calendar and has reviewed every course and description to ensure there is congruency with the new name. Additionally, efforts have been made to update the course descriptions to be more student centric and highlight learning outcomes. All mentions of the previous SMF subject code and plan names are to be changed and requisites will be updated to reflect these changes.
