9. REPORT ON REOPENING

The president highlighted key activities including: reopening plans, the Integrated Coordination and Planning Committee; current thoughts regarding the fall term. In turn, others offered updates. From the vice-president, research and international: the research and innovation planning committee structure; phases of opening of research spaces; future goals and initiatives. From the vice-president, academic & provost: spring and fall academic matters; co-op activity for the fall; a residence update; the "Waterloo Ready" initiative. From the director of safety: the work of the Return to Campus Resource Group; deliverables and considerations.

In discussion: expressions of thanks for work done to date; programs with high first-year acceptance rates are prepared for these numbers; recognition that it is still too early to derive much meaning from the data; fall final assessments will be scheduled by the Registrar's Office; a better understanding of the financial implications will not be known until later in the fall; longer term considerations.

10. REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

The president spoke to the recent passing of Dr. Sylvia Ostry, Waterloo's chancellor in the early 1990s and Dr. Douglas Wright, Waterloo's third president. On behalf of the Waterloo community, he offered condolences to their families and to the Waterloo community on their passing. He briefly spoke to recent QS ranking results, the top priorities for the reopening of campus, and the province's recent announcement about a modernization framework for Ontario's education.

The president spoke next to recent antiracism developments around the world and locally. He spoke to the University's recent statement and how it was seen to be an attack on academic freedom. He confirmed that that was never the intent, and agreed that it could have been articulated better. For clarity, he confirmed that the University of Waterloo is categorically against all forms of racism while being equally supportive of academic freedom. He advised that work is continuing on the development of the President's Anti-Racism Task Force. In discussion: appreciation for the clarity about the earlier statement, and confirmation that it will be retracted and replaced; a suggestion that the earlier statement be clearly repudiated; support for the task force; ways BIPOC students will be engaged; agreement that there is much work to do but the commitment to do it exists.

Final Assessment Report

Religious Studies (BA, Minor, PhD), Jewish Studies (Minor)

January 2020

Executive Summary

External reviewers found that the Religious Studies (RS) programs (BA, Minor) and Jewish Studies Minor delivered by the Department of Religious Studies¹ were in good standing. The reviewers also agreed that the PhD in Religious Studies, jointly offered with Department of Culture and Religion at Wilfrid Laurier University, was in good standing.

“Both programs are in overall good standing and have excellent faculty.”

A total of 6 recommendations were provided by the reviewers, regarding administrative matters, curricular matters, addressing the decrease in majors and course enrolments, and renewing the doctoral program. In response, the program created a plan outlining the specific actions proposed to address each recommendation as well as a timeline for implementation. The next cyclical review for this program is scheduled for 2024-2025.

Background

In accordance with the University of Waterloo’s Institutional Quality Assurance Process (IQAP), this final assessment report provides a synthesis of the external evaluation and the internal response of the programs (BA, Minors, PhD) delivered by the Department of Religious Studies. A self-study (Volume I, II, III) was submitted to the Associate Vice-President, Academic and ¹ The Department of Religious Studies is a joint venture between five agencies of the University of Waterloo: the Faculty of Arts, Conrad Grebel University College, St. Paul’s University College, St. Jerome’s University, and Renison University College [hereafter: the five agencies]. This arrangement is unique within the University in that it is not simply a shared discipline across the various institutions but a shared Department.

Associate Vice-President, Graduate Studies and Postdoctoral Affairs on October 25, 2018. The self-study (Volume I) presented the program descriptions and learning outcomes, an analytical assessment of the programs, including the data collected from a student survey, along with the standard data package prepared by the Office of Institutional Analysis & Planning (IAP). The CVs for each faculty member with a key role in the delivery of the program(s) were included in Volume II of the self-study.

From Volume III, two arm's-length external reviewers were selected by the Associate Vice-President, Academic and Associate Vice-President, Graduate Studies and Postdoctoral Affairs: Dr. Alison Marshall, Professor of Religion, Brandon University, and Dr. Noel Salmond, Professor of Religion, Carleton University.

Reviewers appraised the self-study documentation and conducted a site visit to the University of Waterloo (UW) and Wilfrid Laurier University (WLU) on December 10-11, 2018. An internal reviewer from the University of Waterloo, Dr. Marc Aucoin, Professor of Chemical Engineering, was selected to accompany the external reviewers. The visit included interviews with the Vice-President, Academic & Provost (UW); Associate Vice-President, Academic (UW); Dean of Arts (UW); Dean of Graduate and Postdoctoral Studies (WLU); Chair of Religious Studies (UW), Chair of Religion and Culture (WLU), and UW and WLU Faculty members and staff. The Review Team also had the opportunity to meet with current UW undergraduate and graduate students, WLU PhD students and representatives from the library.

This final assessment report is based on information extracted, in many cases verbatim, from the self-study, the external reviewers' report and the program response.

Program characteristics

Religious Studies (BA): The Religious Studies program allows students to take courses in the areas of World Religions, Christian Traditions, and Religion, Culture and Society. Through their training in method and theory and development of analytical skills, Religious Studies graduates are able to contribute meaningfully to their local communities, Canada, and global society, discussions on contemporary issues regarding religion and public policy, and the broader "issues of the day."

Religious Studies (Minor): The Religious Studies Minor is often added to complement a non-Religious Studies major. Students frequently comment that since Canada is multicultural, it is good to know about people from a variety of cultural/religious contexts.

Jewish Studies (Minor): The Jewish Studies Minor is a program centred on Jewish philosophy, belief, and social history as well as the Bible. It exposes both Jewish and non-Jewish students to Jewish thought, and the interaction and influence of Jewish thought on the development of Christianity and Islam, and offers courses that expose students to the richness of Jewish thought and culture while developing their oral and written competence, and analytic abilities.

Religious Studies (PhD) – joint with Wilfrid Laurier University: The Joint Laurier-Waterloo PhD Program in Religious Studies leads to the Doctor of Philosophy degree, with a research specialization in Religious Diversity in North America. Strongly interdisciplinary, this joint program draws on the combined resources of the Department of Religion and Culture at Wilfrid Laurier University and the Department of Religious Studies at the University of Waterloo, as well as numerous adjunct and associated faculty in different departments at both institutions, including Anthropology, History, Philosophy, Psychology, and Sociology.

Summary of strengths, challenges and weaknesses based on self-study

Strengths: The greatest strength of the program is the quality of the faculty and staff. Professors are dedicated to the intellectual development of their students and sound pedagogical means by which they can accomplish this goal. They understand the value of research as both part of their own career development and as a means of enhancing their teaching. The Administrative Assistant is not only knowledgeable and professional, but also dedicated to the programs and ways to improve them. There are no other staff members in the department.

Challenges: First, RS overall undergraduate enrolment is down about 40% since the 2011 review. Several reasons for this were suggested, including: the complexity of the program; the difficulty in scheduling required courses (e.g., RS 260); the ongoing secularization of Canadian society (which means younger cohorts have little exposure to religion), and the turn to STEM disciplines across Canada and the United States after the 2008 global financial crisis (not many parents see a connection between religious studies and the job market). The programs must increase their visibility on campus and educate students on the importance and value of having a solid grasp of religion in Canada and the world.

Time for online course development is also a major challenge. The Department has decided to put RS260 (How to Study Religion) online in order to mitigate the problem of students dropping the major(s). This will make the course far more accessible, but unfortunately developing online courses takes time and money.

Several retirements have not been replaced and several faculty are currently working on reduced loads, and thus the Department cannot mount the number or variety of courses as desired (particularly 300-level courses).

Finally, the administrative load of the Chair continues to increase, as faculty have less time to devote to department planning and activities. There is also concern around the impending retirement of one or more colleagues.

Weaknesses: In short, the weakness of the programs is that they are lacking in sufficient human resources. Overburdened faculty cannot offer as many courses and cannot attend Department and student events with any regularity; and they publish and attend professional conferences less regularly. Program and curricular changes take longer to develop and implement, which has hampered the program's ability to introduce courses that would appeal to a new cohort of students whom, studies have shown, to have had increasingly less direct experience of religion. A further weakness is the lack of an FTE in Islam, an omission that gets more critical as the years pass.

Summary of key findings from the external reviewers

The reviewers found that both the undergraduate and graduate programs were in good standing. The undergraduate program was commended for its faculty's ability to collaborate together "... at an arm's-length to deliver an impressively broad range of courses". In addition, the doctoral program was recognized as unique within Canada and as having a reputation for producing high-quality students.

Program Response to External Reviewers' Recommendations

1. Empower the [Chair of the Department] with more oversight/authority to undertake a review of all UW RS undergraduate and PhD joint program faculty and conduct a department retreat in order to reduce the duplication of course offerings, to boost the flow of enrolment in upper level courses, increase collaborations between the universities, and explore potential collaborations with other units (e.g., Peace and Conflict Studies).

Response

As indicated in the self-study report, while the Department operates as much as possible like any other department in Arts, in fact it is structured more as a Centre. With the exception of two Waterloo professors (Diamond and Jakobsh), the Department does not hire or evaluate its faculty nor does it assign or schedule courses. Rather, it takes advantage of a variety of resources that it does not control directly. In effect, the Chair operates as a coordinator, who leads the five agencies in a collaborative effort. While inelegant in theory, according to the assessors this model works well in practice, because of the collegial environment of the department and the good will of all five agencies.

However, this highly decentralized structure does present the Department with a number of challenges:

- Lack of communication about sabbaticals, retirements, secondments, teaching releases, etc.

- Lack of control over course scheduling
- Absence of evaluation by the Chair, which can translate into poor communication among Department members about their achievements, duties, and priorities

Both assessors suggested augmenting the authority of the Chair to address these issues, especially to address the decline in major registrations and course enrolments as well as the renewal of the program requirements and course offerings. Although their recommendation may violate the autonomy of the five agencies and thus would meet with some resistance, Department members agreed with the assessors that the role and authority of the Chair needed to be reviewed. Hence, the reviewers suggested finding new ways to augment the capacity of the Chair to coordinate, plan and administer the Department effectively in order to address the decline in majors and course enrolments as well as the restructuring of the program and renewal of the curriculum.

Additionally, the two assessors both recommended a retreat dedicated to renewing the undergraduate program in light of declining course enrolments and registration of majors. At its February meeting, the Department enthusiastically endorsed this recommendation. Additional areas that need to be considered are:

- Program requirements: Members of the Department agreed that some program requirements may discourage or even prevent some students from registering as Majors or Minors, particularly since many students become aware of the Department relatively late in their degree.
- Curricular matters: Members of the Department agreed that courses need to be rethought to appeal to a new generation of students, increasingly polarized between those with exposure to religion and those without. It was recommended that the Department:
 - Re-evaluate titles and course descriptions
 - Re-evaluate course levels (i.e., 100, 200, 300 and 400-level courses)
 - Offer more opportunities for experiential learning
 - Expand online course offerings
 - Rationalize course offerings (e.g., eliminate courses that have not been taught since the last review, ensure that course scheduling allow students to fulfill program requirements in a timely manner; and review offerings of upper level courses)
 - Respond to the University of Waterloo's Indigenization Strategy.

Actions

- a) The Department will hold a retreat to review and simplify the undergraduate program and curriculum, and to discuss strategies for increasing department visibility on campus.
- b) The Department will request a meeting of the Heads (or their delegates) of the five agencies to discuss, clarify, and agree upon the role and powers of the Chair.

January 2020 Update

- a) The Department held two meetings on simplifying the undergraduate program and curriculum. UGAG has already approved simplified Plan changes, renumbering of courses, and removal of a number of dormant courses.
 - b) The Department has requested a January meeting with the Heads of the five agencies.
2. Increase visibility of the undergraduate program to attract more students (e.g., program to do self-promotion and receive support from the centre such as MUR).

Response

Both the assessors' reports and the self-study emphasized the need to better publicize the Department, its programs, and its courses.

First, the Department needs to analyze and better understand why the number of majors has dropped so dramatically in the last number of years. Unfortunately, this is not an isolated instance but rather other traditional departments in the Waterloo Faculty of Arts and other universities have experienced similar declines. As Dr. Marshall observed, "We must emphasize that this enrolment trend is not unique to the Waterloo Religious Studies or Faculty of Arts. Both external assessors have seen similar declines in their upper level enrolments over the years."

Studies have shown that young Canadians are becoming increasingly disconnected from traditional forms of religion and their institutions, and so many have had no direct experience of traditional religion, and hence are uninterested in traditionally defined courses. The Department has already undertaken steps to make itself more visible (e.g., promoting its activities on social media) and to redefine some of its courses to appeal to students.

Actions

- a) The Department will hold a retreat to discuss strategies for increasing department visibility on campus (see action #1 above).
- b) As the first 'face' of the RS Department that students see, editing and continuously updating the RS website is very important. Thus, the Department plans to revise the website in order to: consistently target the typical undergraduate student (17-25 years old, etc.); highlight courses in upcoming terms during pre-enrolment and enrolment periods, making this list (with links to syllabi) one click away from entering the site; underscore the flexibility of the program to encourage students to consider this as a valuable and complementary area of study alongside other areas/majors.
- c) The Department will develop and institute a campus communications plan that regularly promotes the Department: focusing especially on maximizing the effectiveness of online tools (social media, Waterloo Learn, etc.), faculty participation in Arts First program in order to expose students to RS professors, and adding a campus presentation event on undergraduate research in RS.

January 2020 Update

The department has revised its web site, although more changes are foreseen. The Administrative Manager and Chair have worked together to improve outreach through various social media platforms (Facebook, Twitter, Instagram).

3. Increase the current administrative staff position from part-time to full-time in order to support students (e.g., fieldwork forms, ethics approvals etc.) and enhance program communication (e.g., advertising for the program such as posters, social media presence etc.).

Response

Both external assessors strongly recommended that the Administrative Manager's position be made full-time (35 hours) rather than the current part-time (30 hours). This would allow the Administrative Manager to:

- Facilitate communication among Department members, among faculty and students, and among the students themselves.
- Organize colloquia, speaker events, and other events to enhance Department visibility and promote departmental goals.
- Promote and publicize RS courses on social media.
- Assist graduate students, helping them with the Research Ethics milestone, etc.

At the February departmental meeting, there was a strong consensus in support of this recommendation. At the same time, it was recognized that the timing of this recommendation could not be worse as the government announcements regarding university tuition fees means that each of the five agencies may resist any additional expenses.

Actions

- a) The Chair will approach the Heads of the five agencies (see action #2 above) to enquire about the possibility of making the Administrative Manager's position full-time (35 hours).
4. Ensure field methodology training and ethics approval training are built into the doctoral course offerings. Students interviewed all expressed a feeling of isolation and expressed a need to build connections with sociology and anthropology faculty in order to strengthen their research competencies and for students to mobilize knowledge and training opportunities and better understanding of approaches that would help them shape their thesis proposals.

Response

There was a consensus among the two assessors' reports and the self-study regarding requirements for the Laurier-Waterloo Joint Doctoral Program in Religious Diversity in North America. This included exploring courses, workshops, and procedures to ensure that students receive more training in methods (including research ethics training) before beginning their dissertation research stage.

Action

- a) The Department will approach with Wilfrid Laurier University to address the issues of a course on Methods to be offered in the winter semester as well as ethics approval training.

January 2020 Update

The Joint Doctoral Program held a retreat in December 2019 to address this issue. Discussions are ongoing.

- 5. Better coordination of course offers between AFIW institutions and UW.

Response

As observed in the 2011 cyclical review and echoed by the assessors' reports and the self-study, the most important distortions in the area of course offerings are tied to the attempts of department members to meet the equity level teaching requirements of their respective agencies. This has meant, for example, that various agencies tend to offer large-enrollment classes and avoid low-enrolment, upper-level courses. Consequently, it is necessary to discuss the underlying implications of the teaching equity agreement in order to address these curricular matters.

Actions

- a) The Department will request a meeting of the Heads (or their delegates) of the five agencies to come to an agreement around teaching equity levels in Religious Studies in order to empower faculty members to offer courses according to the needs of the program. The Department will ask for clarification and commitments regarding teaching levels in relation to administrative and teaching responsibilities within the agencies. This meeting will also request RS faculty participation in the Arts First program to expose students to professors.
- 6. Renew efforts at fostering communication, community and collegiality among the doctoral students, between the two institutions, and between the faculty and doctoral students.

Response

There was a consensus among the two assessors' reports and the Self-Study for this recommendation.

Action

- a) The Department will approach Wilfrid Laurier University to foster communication, community, and collegiality among the doctoral students, between the two institutions, and between the faculty and doctoral students.

January 2020 Update

The Associate Chair, Graduate Studies, Doris Jakobsh has initiated academic and social events (including dinners for grad students in her own home) to promote collegiality at all levels in the Joint Program.

Initiatives the Program wishes to Implement

The following are recommendations that the program has chosen to include and act upon. A number of these were discussed with the reviewers and included in their reports, but were not listed as concrete recommendations.

1. Renewal of the doctoral program to expand its purview to allow broader participation, partner with other units at Waterloo, and implement an Indigenization plan.

Response

There was a consensus among the two assessors' reports and the self-study on two points regarding the renewal of the Laurier-Waterloo Joint Doctoral Program in Religious Diversity in North America. These included:

- Broadening the focus of the doctoral program to allow for wider participation among departmental members, e.g., revising its North American focus as well as its emphasis on the social scientific study of religion;
- Exploring the potential for a formal connection of the doctoral program with other Waterloo units (e.g., Peace and Conflict Studies, Classical Studies, etc.).

Moreover, Dr. Marshall introduced an important priority not mentioned in the other reports:

- Making indigenization of the Joint Program a priority by involving Indigenous elders from the community in the program, and by hiring faculty in the area of Indigenous Spirituality.

Actions

- a) The Department will facilitate an internal discussion in terms of broadening its purview to open participation to other department members and to begin exploratory discussion with potential Waterloo partners regarding the possibility of expanding the scope of the doctoral program, as well as implementing an Indigenization plan.
- b) The Department will hold a joint retreat with its WLU counterpart to review the doctoral program and to consider an expanded vision moving forward.

January 2020 Update

The Joint Doctoral Program held a retreat in December 2019 to address this issue. There was enthusiasm for expanding the scope of the Joint Doctoral Program.

2. Address the issue of RS faculty complement regarding course releases due to secondments, administrative duties, and teaching in other units; and planning for future retirements, which could represent half of the current faculty complement within the next seven years.

Response

While the two assessors did not discuss the issue of faculty complement at length, the self-study and the discussion at the February 11, 2019 departmental meeting examined the issue thoroughly. There were two main issues identified.

First, although the Department has 13 faculty members, most have course release(s) for administrative duties for the Department, secondments (administrative duties for the four other agencies), and teaching for agency-programs outside of Religious Studies (e.g., Masters of Theological Studies, Conrad Grebel; Masters of Catholic Thought, St. Jerome's). For example, the three members who teach no RS courses serve as senior administrators in their various institutions. Other members are assigned to teach in Masters programs or other Departments in their agencies. A poll of departmental members conducted in the Winter 2019 semester revealed that only one member was teaching a full course load within RS, one member was on sabbatical, and three members taught no RS courses.

While course releases for the purposes of research may be an issue in the Faculty of Arts, the challenge within the RS Department involves course releases due to administrative duty or teaching in other units. As of Winter 2019, no one is receiving a course release for research purposes.

In any case, in terms of teaching and serving in Departmental roles, the Department is operating on a half-complement. This means that: compared to seven years ago, many more courses are taught by sessional appointments; and ii) the pool of people to serve in departmental roles (Chair, Associate Chair, Director of the Joint Doctoral Program) is very limited, to the point where these roles may not be able to be filled in the near future.

In 2019-2020, Department members will teach 26 Undergraduate RS courses, while course releases due to administration and teaching outside of the Department will total 37.

The second issue has to do with retirements. Approximately six members of the Department will reach retirement age by the time of the next cyclical review in 2025. This will affect teaching in both the undergraduate programs (Religious Studies and Jewish Studies) as well as the Joint Doctoral program. Moreover, these retirements will affect the Department's ability to fill essential service roles. At the February 11, 2019 Department meeting, members suggested that in the next few years the Chair should review possible retirements and approach the Deans of the five agencies to determine whether these positions will be renewed and, if so, how (that is, in what field of study).

Actions

- a) The Department will meet with the Heads of the five agencies to negotiate a renewed commitment to Religious Studies that would allow departmental members to teach and perform service in the Waterloo Department of Religious Studies rather than mostly or solely at their respective institutions.
- b) The Department will undertake a study of the impact of impending retirements on the undergraduate and doctoral programs, asking each agency for a commitment to replace retiring professors.

3. Address hiring equity issues in the Department.

Response

The Department recognizes the serious imbalances in terms of diversity among its members. Following Mavis Fenn's retirement in July 2018, three of its members are women, which represents only 25 percent, an imbalance that needs to be addressed (45% of Arts professors are women). Moreover, no one in the department is a member of a visible minority (one has an Indigenous heritage). Hence, replacements for retirements should be done with an eye to increasing diversity.

Action

- a) The Department will meet with the Heads of the five agencies to negotiate a renewed commitment to equity in hiring in Religious Studies.

Implementation Plan

	Recommendations	Proposed Actions	Responsibility for Leading and Resourcing (if applicable) the Actions	Timeline for addressing Recommendations
1.	Empower the Chair/Director of the program with more oversight/authority to undertake a review of all UW RS undergraduate and PhD joint program faculty and conduct a department retreat in order to reduce the duplication of course offerings, to boost the flow of enrolment in upper level courses, increase collaborations between the universities, and explore potential collaborations with other units (e.g., Peace and Conflict Studies).	The Department will hold a retreat to review and simplify the undergraduate program and curriculum. The Department held two meetings on simplifying the undergraduate program and curriculum. UGAG has already approved simplified Plan changes, renumbering of courses, and removal of a number of dormant courses. There was also discussion of strategies increase enrolments and explore collaborations with other units. The development of online courses will also be discussed. The Department will also request a meeting of the Heads (or their delegates) of the five agencies to discuss, clarify, and agree upon the role and powers of the Chair. 2.	Increase visibility of the undergraduate program to attract more students (e.g., program to do self-promotion and receive support from the centre such as MUR).	The Department will hold a retreat to discuss strategies for increasing department visibility on campus (see #1 above). Revise the RS Department website to: consistently target the typical undergraduate student (17-25 years old, etc.); highlight upcoming courses, making this list (with syllabi) one-click away from entering the site; and underscore the flexibility of the program, to encourage students to consider this as a valuable and complementary area of study alongside other areas/majors. Develop and institute a public communications procedure that regularly promotes the department, focusing especially on maximizing the effectiveness of online tools (social media, UW Learn,	(Acting) Chair; Associate Chair, Undergraduate Studies	In progress and ongoing.

The Administrative Manager and Chair have worked together to improve outreach through various social media platforms (Facebook, Twitter, Instagram).
3.	Increase the current administrative staff position from part-time to full-time in order to support students (e.g., fieldwork forms, ethics approvals etc.) and enhance program communication (e.g., advertising for the program such as posters, social media presence etc.). Professor David DeVidi
Associate VP, Academic
University of Waterloo

Dear Dave,

I am appending a brief decanal response to the Final Assessment Report on Religious Studies. I am supportive of the Department's wish to move forward with the specific recommendations outlined in their implementation plan. As you know, the Faculty of Arts is currently in a situation that puts constraints on its ability to make immediate financial promises to any unit. Moreover, the equity agreements between the AFIW and the University are complex and challenging. For that very reason, I suspect that they at times present barriers to innovation; it may well be time to examine them in detail, but it will be a lengthy process.

Nevertheless, as the Faculty works towards eliminating its financial deficit, I am open to conversations around forward planning, and am committed to doing whatever I can to put all units on a sound footing. In the case of RS, I'm particularly supportive of enhanced Indigenization of the program, and look forward to working together with our AFIW colleagues towards that goal.

Sincerely,

Sheila Ager

FOR INFORMATION

Recognition and Commendation

Two students received one of Canada's highest honours in academia: the Governor General's Gold Medal. For highest standing in a doctoral program, Psychology PhD student Harrison Oakes (MA '16) with the Faculty of Arts is recognized for his accomplishments in the research on social environments that stigmatize concealable identities. Former master's student Joanne Marie Fitzgibbons (MES '19) with the Faculty of Environment is being celebrated for her explorations in the process and politics of planning for urban resilience. Created in 1873 by Canada's third Governor General Lord Dufferin, the Governor General's Gold Medal is an award given out annually to students from different institutions who achieve the highest level of academic scholarship for their cohort at their institution.

Oakes is recognized for his interdisciplinary research on identity suspicion, which highlights that social environments that stigmatize concealable identities (e.g., mental illness, being gay) oppress both people with the stigmatized identity and people with the contrasting non-stigmatized identity. For example, Oakes' findings have demonstrated that in homophobic environments, people suspect even straight-identifying students with stereotypically straight interests of hiding a stigmatized sexual identity. As a result, students in these environments are expected to conceal behaviours and interests associated with the stigmatized identity to avoid having their identity questioned by their peers. Oakes has a broad range of research experience, spanning work in identity perception, moral psychology, reasoning about social conflicts and identity expression on dating apps. Much of his research has been published in leading journals, including Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences. Oakes has also received multiple awards for his scholarly work, including the prestigious Vanier Canada Graduate Scholarship.

Having graduated with a Master of Environmental Studies (Planning) in fall 2019, Fitzgibbons' list of accomplishments continues to grow. Her Master's thesis explored how urban planning for resilient and sustainable cities can be more equitable and just. Fitzgibbons' findings have led to the conclusion that urban planners can build resilience in a way that is equitable and inclusive, when city planners deliberately consider issues of redistribution and recognition, as well as participate during both strategic development and implementation stages.

Waterloo Professor Imre Szeman is part of a group of top researchers from the humanities and social sciences involved in the International Panel on Behavior Change (IPBC) association. The association, launched at the beginning of June, aims to develop a multidisciplinary scientific behavioural research program that will address current and predicted global societal and environmental crises, including climate change. The IPBC originated from an initiative launched by the Institute of Environmental Medicine (Paris) and the International Society of Behavioral Medicine. The IPBC, which is comprised of a federation of national societies, emerged out of meetings hosted by the United Nations Environment Programme in Paris (2019 and 2020). Following the example of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), this group intends to publish in-depth reports presenting multidisciplinary, state of the art behavioural indicators, drivers and obstacles to societal, economic and environmental change and adaptation, as well as punctual reports on specific themes. An expert in environmental communication, Szeman will lead the amalgamation of relevant studies in communications about climate mitigation. Szeman's role will support the inclusion of a broader field of scholarship on climate change, looking specifically at the effectiveness of communication strategies on climate change. Szeman is also on the IPBC media committee, responsible for communicating about the IPBC across Canada and the U.S, and sits on the board. Waterloo's Interdisciplinary Centre on Climate Change (IC³) is the IPBC's institutional host in Canada.

Thomas Brzustowski, a former member of the Faculty of Engineering and Provost Emeritus, passed away on Friday, June 19, 2020. Born in Warsaw, Poland in 1937, Brzustowski came to Canada in 1948. Brzustowski graduated with a BSc in Engineering Physics from the University of Toronto in 1958, and a Master's and PhD in Aeronautical Engineering from Princeton in 1960 and 1963, respectively. His research areas included thermodynamics and combustion, rocket propulsion, celestial mechanics, and spectroscopy. Brzustowski joined Mechanical Engineering in September 1962 as an assistant professor, becoming a full professor in September 1966. He served as chair of Mechanical Engineering from 1967 to 1970, and as associate dean, graduate studies from 1971 to 1974. Brzustowski served on a number of key committees and governance bodies at the University, including the committee that drafted the University of Waterloo Act in 1972. In 1975 he was appointed vice-president, academic. During this time, he also worked to establish the University's Distinguished Teacher Awards. He was reappointed to a second term as vice-president, academic in 1980, and a truncated three-year term (at his request) in 1985. In 1986, Brzustowski led the committee that produced the University's "Fourth Decade Report," the first of three "decade plans" that were the forerunners to today's Strategic Plan. Even as the University's top academic official, Brzustowski carried on his teaching and research, and gave undergraduates top priority for appointments with him. In June 1987, Brzustowski's portfolio was expanded to include new duties as the University's first provost, in effect becoming the University's chief operating officer as well as its senior academic administrator.

Not long after receiving the provostial title, Brzustowski departed from Waterloo to serve as deputy minister in the Government of Ontario from 1987 to 1995, first in the Ministry of Colleges and Universities and later on the deputy of the Premier's Council on Economic Renewal in 1991. At the Ministry of Colleges and Universities, Brzustowski succeeded Alan Adlington, who had previously served as Waterloo vice-president, academic from 1961 to 1970. In doing so, Brzustowski joined an exclusive club of former senior University of Waterloo administrators who had transitioned to the public service, including Al Adlington and Douglas Wright as deputy ministers and former Waterloo president Burt Matthews, who served as chair of the Ontario Council on University Affairs from 1982 to 1984.

He was appointed president of the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council (NSERC) in October 1995, and reappointed in 2000, retiring in 2005. Brzustowski was the second former top Waterloo administrator to head a major federal scientific agency, after Arthur Carty. After his retirement from NSERC, Brzustowski returned to the University of Waterloo as a senior advisor to the Institute for Quantum Computing (IQC) for a three-year term. He played a unique role in advancing the Institute by establishing linkages with industry and governments as well as national and international research organizations and individuals. Following his term as advisor, he continued to serve as a member and Chair of IQC's board of directors.

Brzustowski held honorary doctorates from institutions including Alberta, Concordia, école Polytechnique de Montréal, Guelph, McMaster, Ottawa, Royal Military College of Canada, Ryerson, and Waterloo, and received the Engineering Alumni Medal from the University of Toronto. He was an Officer of the Order of Canada and a fellow of the Canadian Academy of Engineering, the Engineering Institute of Canada and of the Royal Society of Canada. He won the Angus Medal of the Canadian Society for Mechanical Engineering in 1976, 1978, and 1982. In 2006 he received the Ontario Professional Engineering Association's Gold Medal for making "significant and lasting contributions to research and development in Canadian engineering."

Anson Yu of Langley, BC, is the latest Loran Scholar to choose Waterloo after landing a four-year scholarship aimed at finding and supporting high-potential young Canadians. Engineering's co-op program was a major draw for an incoming student who will start her studies this fall with backing from a prestigious scholarship worth up to $100,000. Yu is one of 36 scholarship recipients for 2020 selected from an initial pool of more than 5,100 applicants across the country. "Despite classes being online in the fall, I am still beyond excited to join the Warrior community," she said, adding she picked Waterloo Engineering because it "helps connect the classroom with the workplace with its career-oriented co-op program." A graduate of R.E. Mountain Secondary School, Yu led a national youth team for a charity that empowers children with disabilities and established the first beehive at her school. The University of Waterloo owes much of its international reputation and stature to the quality of its eminent professors. University of Waterloo recognizes exceptional scholarly achievement and international pre-eminence through the designation “University Professor”. Once appointed, a faculty member retains the designation until retirement.

The scholars are to be chosen by the nominee's Chair/Director in consultation with the Dean and the nominator. The letter of nomination should explain why these particular scholars were chosen.
4. Letters soliciting comments from scholars shall be sent by the Chair/Director. Scholars shall be asked to comment on the impact and specific nature of the nominee's most influential contributions, addressing their responses directly to the Vice-President, Academic & Provost.

Probationary Term

SIGAEVA, Taiseya, Assistant Professor, Department of Systems Design, August 1, 2020 – June 30, 2023. PhD in Mechanical Engineering, University of Alberta, Alberta, Edmonton, 2015; Specialist in Mechanics with Honors (equivalent to Bachelor's degree), Southern Federal University, Rostov-on-Don, Russia, 2012. Taiseya has also worked in the engineering industry and completed a Post-Doctoral Fellowship at both York University and the University of Calgary. Her combination of mathematical systems modeling, especially problems in nonlinear continuum mechanics with surface effects, fits very well with Systems Design Engineering's focus on using data-driven technology to improve society and human life. In the Biological Tissue Mechanics Lab she has worked with various tissues including skin, aortic valves and blood vessels. We are thrilled that she will do both laboratory and modeling work in our department. Taiseya's hire is part of the department's 5-year push to build a new unique biomedical engineering program at UWaterloo. Taiseya arrives this fall from Boston where she is currently working remotely.

Report of the Council of Ontario Universities Academic Colleagues Meetings (Spring 2020)

The COU Academic Colleagues met via Zoom on April 23, May 13, June 18 and August 18-19, 2020. The April meeting was devoted to updates from all of the Colleagues on how their institution was coping with COVID-19. All institutions reported that all learning for the Spring term (if applicable) would be online, and, at the time of the meeting, fall decisions had not been made. Normal COU business was deferred to the next meeting.

May 13, 2020 Meeting

The May COU Academic Colleagues meeting was devoted to updates from COU on its work, including personnel changes and the ongoing COU President search.

In April, COU established three working groups to develop policy and government advocacy recommendations on three priority areas of concern for the sector. These priority areas and associated working groups are:

1. Student Supports – ensuring that financial hardships resulting from COVID-19 do not prevent students from attending university in the Summer and Fall 2020;
2. Alternative Program Delivery – supporting universities in their effort to provide alternative models of delivery for university instruction; and
3. Institutional Stabilization – ensuring that the extra costs and financial impact of COVID-19 do not undermine the quality and viability of Ontario’s university system.

Waterloo is well represented on the Institutional Stabilization working group via Dennis Huber (VP Finance and Administration) and Rob Esselment (Associate Vice-President, Government Relations)

COU staff summarized COU’s submission to the Ontario Jobs and Recovery Committee, “Ontario’s Universities: Partners in Rebuilding Ontario”. The brief highlighted the strong economic and employment contributions of the Ontario university sector, noting that it is worth approximately $116B per year, directly employs over 110,000 and creates a further 478,000 jobs as a result of university-related activity in local communities. However, at the time, it was anticipated that COVID-19 would increase costs to universities and likely result in decreased enrollment. These costs were estimated at $1-1.5B. Financial stability is a key requirement to meeting three recovery-related priorities: supporting student access to post-secondary education, ensuring health and safety of our students, and providing an enriching university experience through new and evolving programming and delivery methods.

June 18, 2020 Meeting

The June 18 meeting was focused on student mental health impacts resulting from COVID-19. Academic Colleague Dr. Kim Helleman from the Department of Neuroscience at Carleton University presented emerging insights from her own work. Research already indicates that academic success is strongly tied to student well-being, that first year students are particularly vulnerable, and that a feeling of connectedness to their peers is one of the key buffers to the stress of university life. Pre-COVID (Fall 2019), Dr. Helleman’s University Transition Study indicated that almost 70% of first year students feel stressed by the demands of coursework; other stressors include study/life balance, financial problems, mental health concerns, family/friend relationships and romantic relationships. Furthermore, over half of university students report loneliness, and feelings of isolation were exacerbated by the COVID-19 shutdown and subsequent physical and social distancing. Early research results indicate that, as a result of COVID-19, we can expect increased mental health problems and problematic substance abuse among university students, and that first year students are particularly vulnerable. The importance of creating online communities and connections was highlighted, as well as maintaining and enhancing existing mental health supports – though it was also noted that white, heterosexual female students were far more likely to seek out these supports.

Colleagues were pointed to the Centre for Innovation in Campus Mental Health resource page: <https://campusmentalhealth.ca/covid-19-resources/>

August 18-19 Meeting

The theme of the August 18-19 Meeting of the COU Academic Colleagues was Anti-Black Racism. The August 18 evening meeting was an unstructured conversation with Dr. Carl James, Chair in Education, Community, & Diaspora at York University. The subsequent discussion on August 19th highlighted the need for action on anti-black racism at all levels of our teaching and research, from student recruitment, support for BIPOC students at every level, increased mentoring, and the particular importance of representation via faculty hires and supports for black faculty.

The remainder of the meeting focused on COU updates, including an orientation on the COU structure for new academic colleagues. Mike Snowdon, COU Senior Policy Analyst, provided a summary of Ministry of Colleges and Universities changes in light of COVID-19. In particular, updates to the ongoing Strategic Mandate Agreement (SMA3) process were noted. The signing of SMA3 was delayed, though the Ministry aims to have all agreements signed by August 31, 2020. While universities are still expected to report on performance-based indicators starting in 2020-2021, grant adjustments as a result of performance-based evaluation are now delayed until Year 4 of the agreement (2024-2025) and will be based on Year 3 assessments. Reporting on faculty compensation and faculty workload activity has been delayed until Year 3.

COU consultations with the Ministry have highlighted that COVID-19 has resulted in $125M of new costs (related to health and safety) for Ontario's universities, and the sector hopes that the Ministry will offset these. Furthermore, COU is advocating for increased support for student financial as well as lifting the current tuition freeze to help universities meet rising costs.

Dr. Snowdon reported that the Minister was impressed by the nimbleness, speed and success with which Ontario universities pivoted to meet COVID-19 challenges. Minister Romano's current priorities were summarized in four key pillars:

1. Digital learning. The Ministry maintains its interest in online learning, and seeks to find new efficiencies and export Ontario's post-secondary education excellence through digital learning. While there are visions of cost-sharing and centralized "platforms", COU advocates for a focus on enhanced IT infrastructure, supporting students with better equipment, and key supports for the development of digital learning.
2. Microcredentials. The Ministry had already started to pursue microcredentials in the college sector; these are now seen as having the potential to support retraining and upskilling for unemployed and furloughed workers. Microcredentials continue to be poorly defined, and have not yet been met with employer recognition. Under the current model, microcredentials are primarily stand-alone and OSAP ineligible. COU recognizes that there are opportunities, but advocates for a more measured, evidence-based pace.

3. Internationalization. The Ministry understands the importance of international students, both for enhancing the quality of the Ontario university experience as well as their economic contributions to the sector. COU is aware of the concern of both international students and universities with respect to travel bans, quarantine, digital access and possible censorship if international students are digitally participating from abroad. COU is asking the Province to work with their federal counterparts to help reduce barriers to bringing international students physically to Ontario.
4. Research and Innovation. Ontario has launched its Intellectual Property Action Plan, which resulted from recommendations by the Jim Balsillie-chaired Expert Panel on Intellectual Property. COU expects an ongoing focus on IP and commercialization.

Senate Undergraduate Council met on 15 June 2020 and agreed to forward the following items to Senate for approval in the regular agenda.

FOR APPROVAL

NEW ACADEMIC PLANS & RELATED INACTIVATIONS

Renison University College

Diploma in English for Multilingual Speakers; Certificate in English for Multilingual Speakers

1. Motion: That Senate approve the creation of a diploma in English for multilingual speakers and inactivation of the existing certificate in English for multilingual speakers, effective 1 September 2021.

Rationale and Background:

Due to changes in the definition of Certificates and Diplomas established by the Common Language Working Group, the Certificate in English for Multilingual Students (EMLS) needs to be deactivated, because it no longer fits the definition of Certificates. (Current calendar entry: <http://ugradcalendar.uwaterloo.ca/page/Certificate-English-for-Multilingual-Speakers>)

This means the undergraduate EMLS Certificate will no longer be recorded on students' official transcripts. In order to maintain a pathway for students who still wish to have an EMLS credential on their official transcripts, Renison is proposing a Diploma in English for Multilingual Speakers.

Proposed Requirements: Students for whom English is an additional language, and who are registered in degree programs or any non- or post-degree academic plan at the University of Waterloo, are eligible to take a diploma in EMLS. The Diploma in EMLS requires successful completion of a minimum of two (2.0) academic course units (four courses) in EMLS with a minimum cumulative average of 65%.

REPORT OF THE DEAN OF APPLIED HEALTH SCIENCES
Report to Senate
21 September 2020

FOR APPROVAL

Faculty Name Change

Motion: That Senate recommend to the Board of Governors the following name change: “Faculty of Applied Health Sciences” to “Faculty of Health” effective 1 January 2021.

Context:

The Faculty of Applied Health Sciences began strategic planning in December 2018, with the final plan approved by Faculty Council, May 2020. One of the discussions revolved around the name of the Faculty and whether a broader name would more fully represent not only our academic programs and research, but be more in line with our priorities for 2020-25 and beyond.

Rationale:

1. The Faculty has been known by different names since its inception: It grew out of the School of Physical and Health Education in 1967, became the School of Physical Education and Recreation in 1968, and developed into the Faculty of Human Kinetics and Leisure Studies in the 1970s. The name ‘Applied Health Sciences’ was chosen in 1991, with the rationale that ‘Applied’ reflects the importance of applying research to current health challenges. However, in terms of branding identity, the word ‘Applied’ can be misunderstood by external audiences, resulting in the need to clarify what it means and why it is part of the name. In Ontario especially, the word ‘Applied’ has other connotations based on the non-academic/vocational stream in high schools, which can result in misperceptions for prospective students, and may diminish the view of our academic strengths. While we still prioritize the importance of applying academic knowledge to everyday health problems, we believe the word does not need to be in the name of the Faculty since it misrepresents our educational offerings to some of our key stakeholders: prospective undergraduate students seeking to enter health professional career paths, as well as to industry.
2. In addition, the research that is conducted in the three academic units reflects different aspects of health and well-being and looks at this from different perspectives, not just the sciences. Seeing as how our priorities for 2020-25 will encompass a multidisciplinary view of health, including that implied in recreation and leisure studies, the proposed name change would align more clearly with the idea of building healthy futures for all.
3. Finally, the name would be consistent with the other University Faculty names, which are all one word (Engineering, Arts, Environment, Science, Math), and which would add clarity to our brand offering.

Environmental scan:

Our counterparts in Canada are as follows:

- Dalhousie and York* – Faculty of Health
- McMaster, Western, Queen’s, Manitoba, SFU* and Ottawa – Faculty of Health Sciences
- Manitoba – also has a Faculty of Kinesiology and Recreation Management
- Regina* – Faculty of Kinesiology and Health Studies

- Winnipeg* – Gupta Faculty of Kinesiology and Applied Health
- Brock* – Faculty of Applied Health Sciences

Furthermore, some universities have programs in kinesiology, recreation and public health, but do not use 'Health' in their Faculty names. Because of this inconsistency in naming conventions, and the range of Faculty names related to the study of health, it is reasonable to expect that the name change will not have any negative impact on our place in the Canadian educational system.

Moreover, students tend to identify with their program name, not that of the Faculty, which would not be affected by this change at this time.

No medical school*

Consultation process

The proposed name change was approved unanimously by the AHS Strategic Planning Advisory Committee, and is one of the recommendations arising from the 2020-25 AHS Strategic Plan. The recommendation will be presented at Administrative Council, Faculty Council, Deans' Council, Senate and the Board of Governors.

Faculty, staff and graduate students were asked for input via the Dean's monthly newsletter, and then via a survey on the final draft of the Strategic Plan 2020-25. Faculty and staff were also consulted at various committees, and were invited to contact a member of the Strategic Planning Advisory committee to share comments.

Undergraduate and graduate students were consulted via their student associations, with special consideration being made to retain the AHS acronym for undergraduate (or all) students. The kangaroo mascot (AHSSIE) and AHSUM, the undergraduate student association, both rely on the acronym. There are possibilities for retaining it if it were to change, for example, to represent the "Association of Health Students." Students were also invited to take a survey and to share opinions with the Committee.

Alumni were also informally canvassed throughout the year by the Dean and Advancement Director while in Boston, Vancouver, Ottawa and Toronto. Support for the proposal was forthcoming, often wholeheartedly.

Student Q&As on the proposed Faculty name change

Did you consider ‘Faculty of Health Sciences’ as an option?

Yes, it was one of the options we considered closely. Ultimately, though, we think ‘Faculty of Health’ better encompasses the different types of degrees in our Faculty – that is, both Arts and Sciences. Also, because it is more broad, it should provide a bigger umbrella for more disciplines to fall under. We recognize that we may never find a name that encompasses all our research areas, but we think ‘Health’ comes closest.

How does Recreation and Leisure Studies (RLS) fit into “Health?”

Many, if not most, areas of this department should fit into the definition of health that alludes to wellness. Even tourism, sports and park recreation fit into the concept of health, whether it refers to the sustainability of our environment and how we relate to it, or the act of finding health and wellness in activities such as sport, leisure and social justice. As in the question above, it may not be the perfect name, but it is probably more inclusive of RLS than the current name.

Doesn’t “Health” sound like it is just referring to students in the School of Public Health and Health Systems?

It’s true that students in the School might say they study health when they are referring to public health or health studies, but we don’t think that means no one else can say they study in the Faculty of Health. We believe it would not be a hard transition to make, seeing as how students in Kinesiology and Recreation and Leisure Studies also study health from different perspectives.

What would the name change mean for my degree? How will it affect my chances for receiving funding, or marketability in the job market or academia?

The name change should not have any negative effect on your degree or marketability because it is not normally used when displaying or talking about your degree. When you graduate from this Faculty, you graduate with a BA, BSc, BPH, MA, MSc, MPH, MHI, MHE or PhD in your program, whatever that may be.

If you were studying at a different university, your program might be found in a totally different Faculty, so it really should not have any bearing on your marketability. What counts for more is what you studied and learned, where you studied, and how well you showcase your knowledge and attitude in interviews or applications.

Conversely, the Faculty name can make a difference in student and faculty recruitment, since a broad name can expand our applicant pool and reach candidates that may otherwise not consider applying.

Is my academic unit also considering changing its name?

The academic units often evaluate the suitability of their names, and a time such as this would no doubt be a catalyst for these types of discussions. However, at this time, no final decisions have been made in this regard.

What if the Faculty name doesn't represent what I'm studying or the research that I do?
Will it hurt my chances of receiving funding?

When you apply for funding, what matters is the strength of your application to the funding body, not the name of the Faculty. The Faculty name has more to do with brand, and in this respect, while it tries to represent all fields of study within it, it also has to weigh the importance of including them all versus having the name be easily recognizable, understandable and memorable.

What happens to AHSUM and AHSSIE and all the things we love about the AHS name?

We love those puns and our kangaroo as well, and we would love for that not to change. In the end, though, what happens to the undergraduate student association name is up to students. We think it is feasible to retain some sort of AHS acronym, either as a legacy piece, or as part of a new identity (e.g., Association of Health Students). We know that our students are clever and fun, and that they can steer the branding in a cool direction if they want to. The teal colour will still be there, and ideally, so will AHSSIE.

Is rebranding a good use of our funds right now?

Rebranding is a huge endeavour with many components, and often, significant costs are attached to it. In our case, our visual identity (colour, font, etc.) will not change because our marketing is coordinated with the rest of the University. Recruitment brochures are also coordinated centrally, and they would be done according to the normal cycle and should not incur extra costs. Items such as letterhead are available online and business cards, if they are used at all, can be used up in the year or two it takes to fully transition. What will entail a cost is new signage, but the University is finalizing a wayfinding process right now so it is possible we might be able to coordinate with that project. Websites and other online assets will require human resources, but not extra funds that could better be spent elsewhere. The Faculty strives to be financially responsible, and believes that the costs for a name change would not be onerous, especially since the transition will occur over time.

Is the name change part of the AHS Strategic Plan 2020-25?

Yes, it is one of the Objectives in the proposed plan, under the Internal and External Community Engagement Priority. However, because the name affects other areas of the University, it needs to be treated differently than the rest of the plan and must go through the University approval process, including Senate and the Board of Governors. The rest of the AHS Strategic Plan needs to be approved by the bodies within AHS, such as Faculty Council. That is why the name change is on a different timeline than the rest of the plan.

When would the name change take effect?

Assuming it goes through the approval process in the coming months and gets on the agenda for Board of Governors in November, then we could be ready to implement it by January 2021. However, it will take about a year for the name change to be fully integrated into the normal cycle of recruitment and registrar materials, and for us to turn over all our website and social media assets. The idea is that it would be fully in effect for Fall 2022.

How were students able to show their feedback?

We started consulting with student representatives in winter 2020, although we did have some less formal opportunities going back to last year. Of course, students have been sitting on the Strategic Plan Advisory Committee, and were also invited to send comments to members of the Advisory Committee or to the Senior Manager, Marketing and Communications (which some students have done). Students were also interested in participating in a poll, so one was distributed to graduate students by the graduate student representatives, and another was distributed the first week of June to undergraduates.

Reopening of On-Campus Research

All phases of reopening on-campus research, for research that was hindered by working remotely, have now been initiated. The last phase included initiating face-to-face human participant studies and was initiated mid-August.

Medical and Public Health Advisory Working Group

A Medical and Public Health Advisory Working Group is being established to support Waterloo's safe return to campus. This group will play a key role in ensuring that public health advice and best practices inform our next steps, and above all, the health and safety of our employees and our students. Reporting to the President & Vice-Presidents Council, this Working Group will serve as a resource to senior leadership for best practices regarding public health on campus to support ongoing planning, during the 2020-2021 academic year. Some aspects of its mandate include:

- Develop and implement processes for seamless collaboration with Public Health officials in response to positive cases on campus or in the community
- Advise on targets for metrics and actions to be triggered with regard to compliance monitoring and COVID-19 cases
- Advise university senior administration re: approach to tracking individuals on campus and support for contact tracing
- Advise and inform the university's role in any student testing pilot or program(s)
- Ensure transparency regarding the public health obligations of the university and measures to be implemented

COVID-19 Research at Waterloo

There are approximately 100 active projects by Waterloo researchers that are related directed to COVID-19. These projects span all six Faculties and involves almost every University-level Centre and Institute, including the Waterloo Institute for Nanotechnology, the Centre for Bioengineering and Biotechnology, the Cybersecurity and Privacy Institute, the Waterloo Institute for Sustainable Energy, the Interdisciplinary Centre for Climate Change, and the Games Institute. Categories of research projects are also diverse and include vaccines and treatments, virus and antibody detection, virus surveillance and monitoring, virus prevention and protection, public policy and population-level health, social determinants of health, economic impacts, and mental health impacts. In addition to grant support, a diverse set of partner companies and non-profits - ranging from Rogers to Gold Sentinel to St. Michaels Hospital to Avro Life Science to Evercloak – have supported research efforts.

GEDI

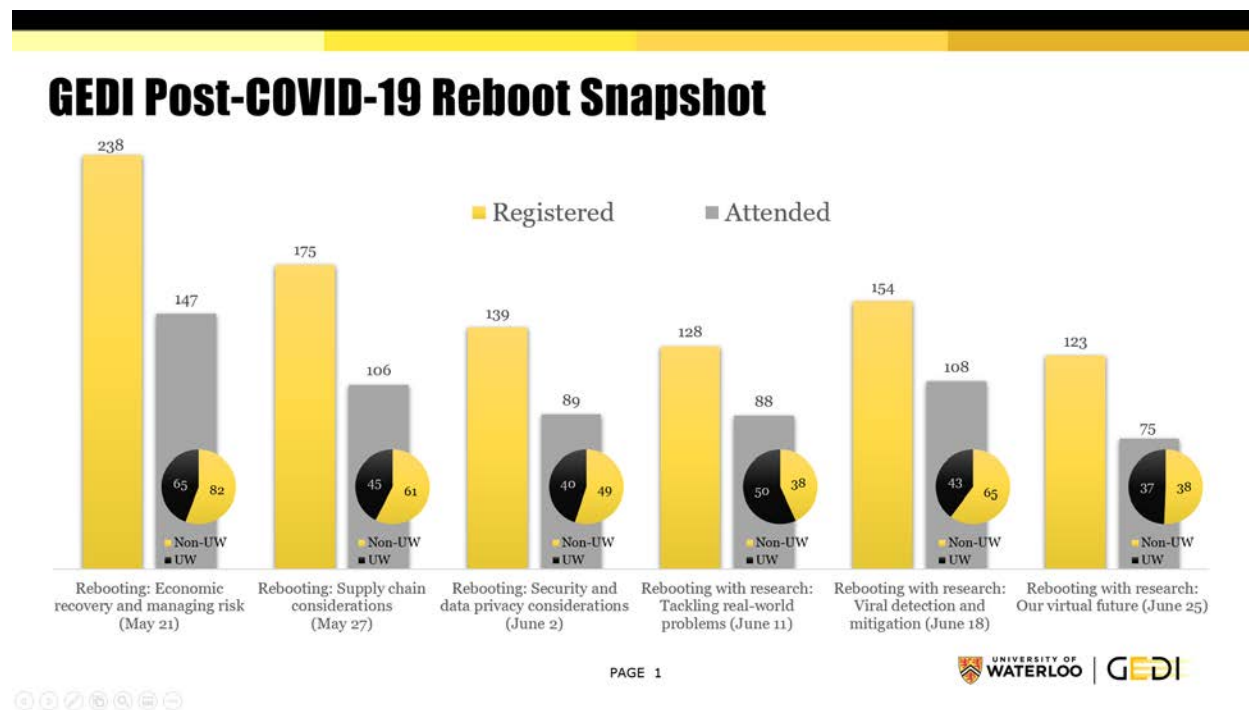

In an exercise of thought-leadership, GEDI hosted a successful series of virtual, industry-academic panel discussions themed around a Post-COVID Reboot.

In this series of six panel-style webinars, experts from the University of Waterloo and representatives from some of Canada's leading companies shared their research, real-world expertise, and experience to help identify the risks and plot the future of adapting to this new normal.

The first three webinars covered broadly applicable reboot topics: Economic Recovery & Managing Risk, Supply Chain Considerations, and Security and Data Privacy Considerations. Three additional webinars covered how the University is rebooting with research: Tackling Real-World Problems with Research, Viral Detection & Mitigation, and Our Virtual Future.

A summary of attendance is included below.

International Research Partnerships

- The Waterloo Institute for Sustainable Energy (WISE), through the Affordable Energy for Humanity (AE4H) global change initiative, is participating in a global research and international development assistance project titled “Development of a prototype hybrid minigrid system: Integrating innovative biomass, PV, decentralised lithium battery storage and cloud-based AI monitoring platform to provide 24-hour off-grid, clean electricity”. This project is funded by Innovate United Kingdom and is conducted in partnership with Modularity Grid (UK SME), Brill Power (UK SME), and Mandulis Energy (Ugandan SME). The project seeks to develop and implement an innovative system to provide access to renewable electricity in a remote unelectrified community in northern Uganda.
- WISE will contribute to this project by creating designs, models, and analyses for technical components of the energy system. Jatin Nathwani is the PI, with Kankar Bhattacharya, John Wen, Bissan Ghaddar, and Claudio Canizares as co-PIs. The project will run from April 2020 to March 2022, and will bring approximately $410,000 CAD to Waterloo.

Waterloo International

- International Week is planned for September 21-26, 2020 and will highlight both the global cultures and the microcultures at the University of Waterloo through engagement, collaborations, debates, discussions, and an array of activities for students, staff, and faculty held by a variety of campus partners. For more information please see: <https://uwaterloo.ca/international/international-week>
- Due to COVID-19 and the current Global Affairs Canada travel restrictions, student academic international travel (such as exchange, internships or Co-op) for the Fall 2020 term is still on hold. However, as there are many non-Canadian nationals currently in their home country, many of whom have been unable to return to Canada for various reasons and who might struggle to find co-op positions in Canada if they were able to return, Waterloo International has been closely working with Co-op to enable students who are already outside of Canada to safely complete co-op terms for credit. Robust risk management plans and measures are being implemented to help ensure the safety of these students while allowing them to complete their co-op terms.
