

Search...

Home / Diseases & Conditions / Wisdom varies from culture to culture

Wisdom varies from culture to culture 0

Sep 1, 2012 at 10:51 AM

Tags: America, Conflict, Culture, India, Japan, Japanese, Wisdom

Wisdom may not be everybody's cup of tea. According to scientists, wisdom is directly linked to the ability of resolving conflict. Conflicts are usually resolved differently in different cultures. Americans are known to emphasise individuality and solve conflict in a direct manner. Conversely, the Japanese place a greater emphasis on social cohesion, and tend to settle conflict indirectly, relying on mediation through another person. Psychological scientist Igor Grossmann of the University of Waterloo, Canada and his colleagues investigated how the resolution of conflict and, by extension, wisdom, differs between Japanese and American cultures.

Japanese and American participants, aged between 25 to 75 years, were asked to read newspaper articles that described a conflict between two groups and respond to several questions, including "What do you think will happen after that?" and "Why do you think it will happen this way?" Next, they read stories about conflict between individuals – including siblings, friends, and spouses – and answered the same questions. As Grossmann and colleagues predicted, young and middle-aged Japanese participants showed higher wisdom scores than same-aged Americans for conflicts between groups, according to a Waterloo statement.

For conflicts between people, older Japanese still scored higher than older Americans, though this cultural difference was much smaller than the difference observed between the younger adults. Interestingly, while older age was associated with higher wisdom scores for the American participants, there was no such relationship for the Japanese participants. These findings underscore the point that culture continues to be important for human development, even into old age. While wisdom may come with winter for Americans, the same may not be true for other cultures.

Source: IANS

Tweet

Related News

Lifestyle diseases on the rise in urban India

- ▶ What ails India's healthcare system
- ▶ Traditional Indian beauty secrets
- ▶ South Asia pegged as the hot spot for cross border diseases
- ▶ Aromatherapy: The basics

Related Stories

- ▶ Prez wants Private-Public Partnership to better healthcare services
- ▶ Earthquakes up heart disease risk!
- ▶ Lifestyle diseases on the rise in urban India
- ▶ Five more people tested positive for H1N1 in Lucknow
- ▶ Narayana Netralaya to do collaborative research on preventive eye care

The Daily Health Dose

Sign up to get it your inbox

Post Comment

Enter your name

Enter your email ID

Post your comment here